

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

Platen - Sonnets to Literary Personages. 1922.

48557
15

3 2044 010 560 787

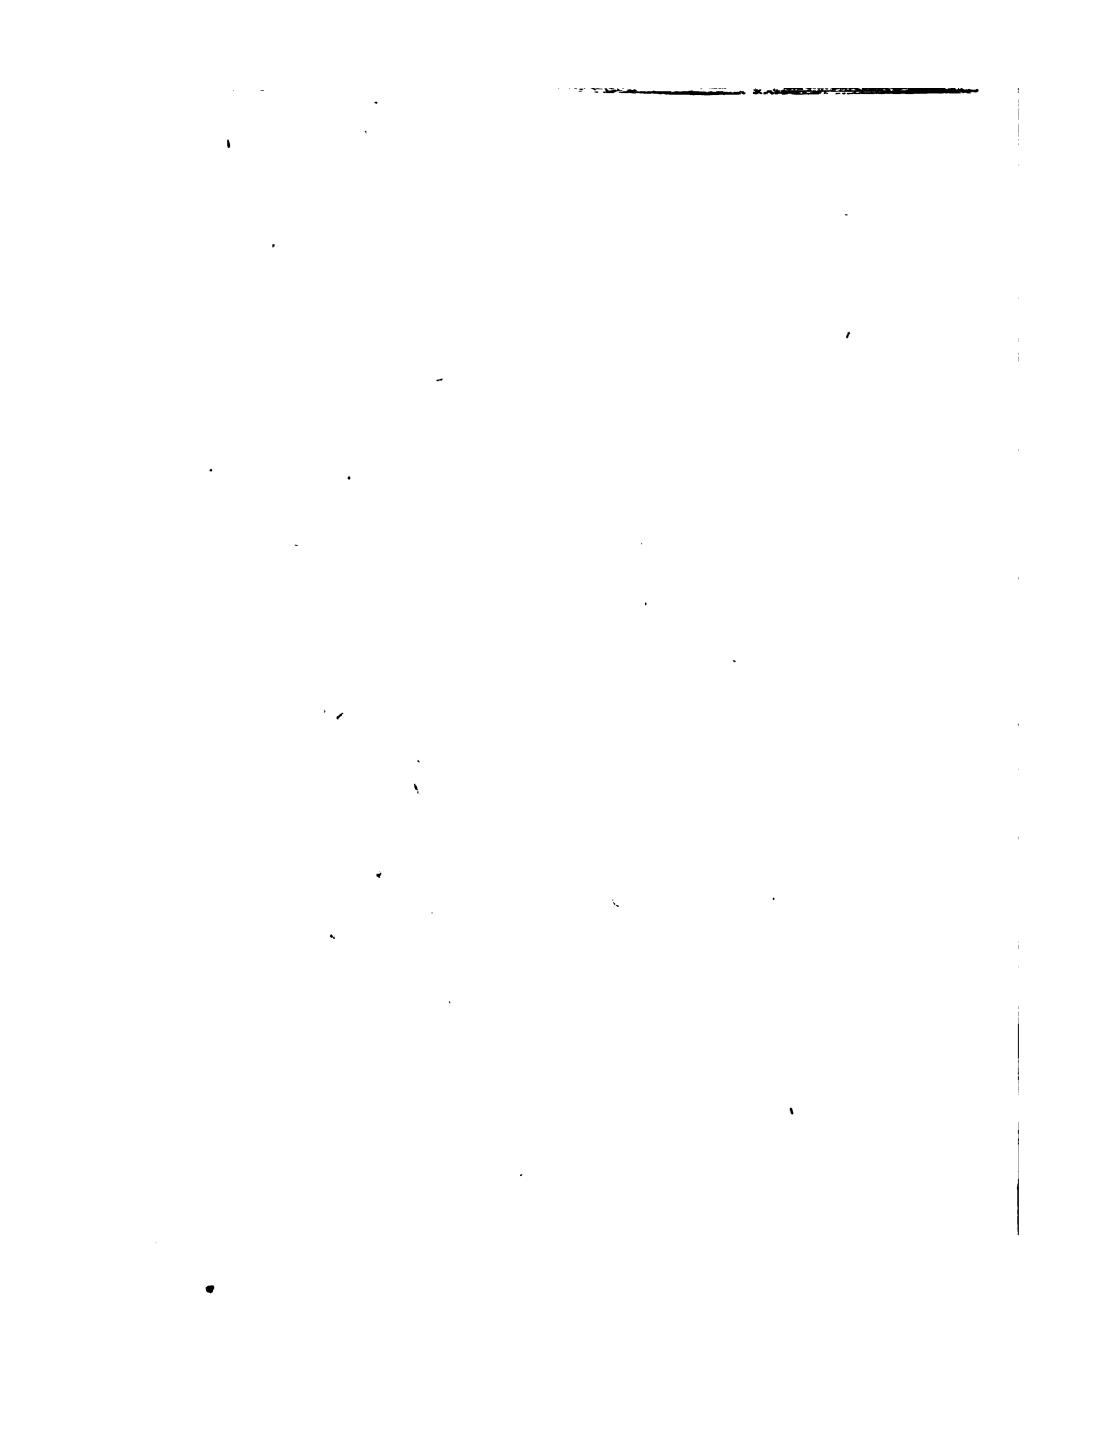

48557.15

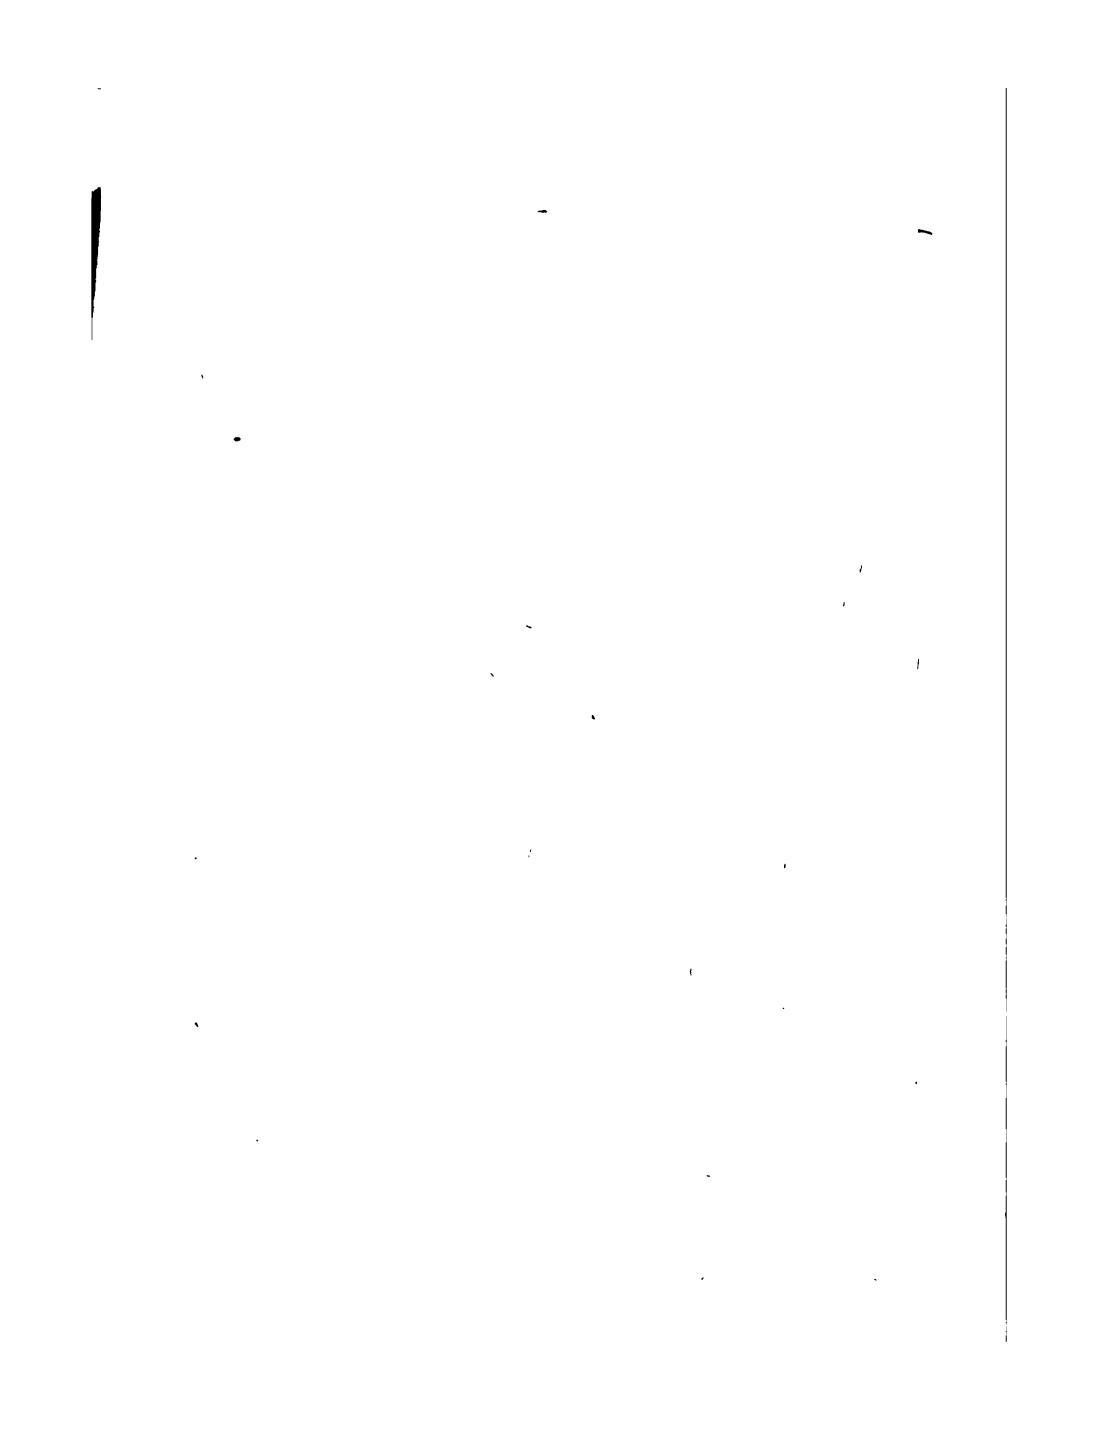

Harvard College Library

FROM

The Translator

Sonnets to Literary + + Personsages

BY

JOHN GALT

With the translators convenient.

SONNETS TO
LITERARY PERSONAGES

TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN OF

PLATEN

BY

REGINALD B. COOKE, PH.D.

ANDRUS & CHURCH
ITHACA, NEW YORK
1922

48557.15

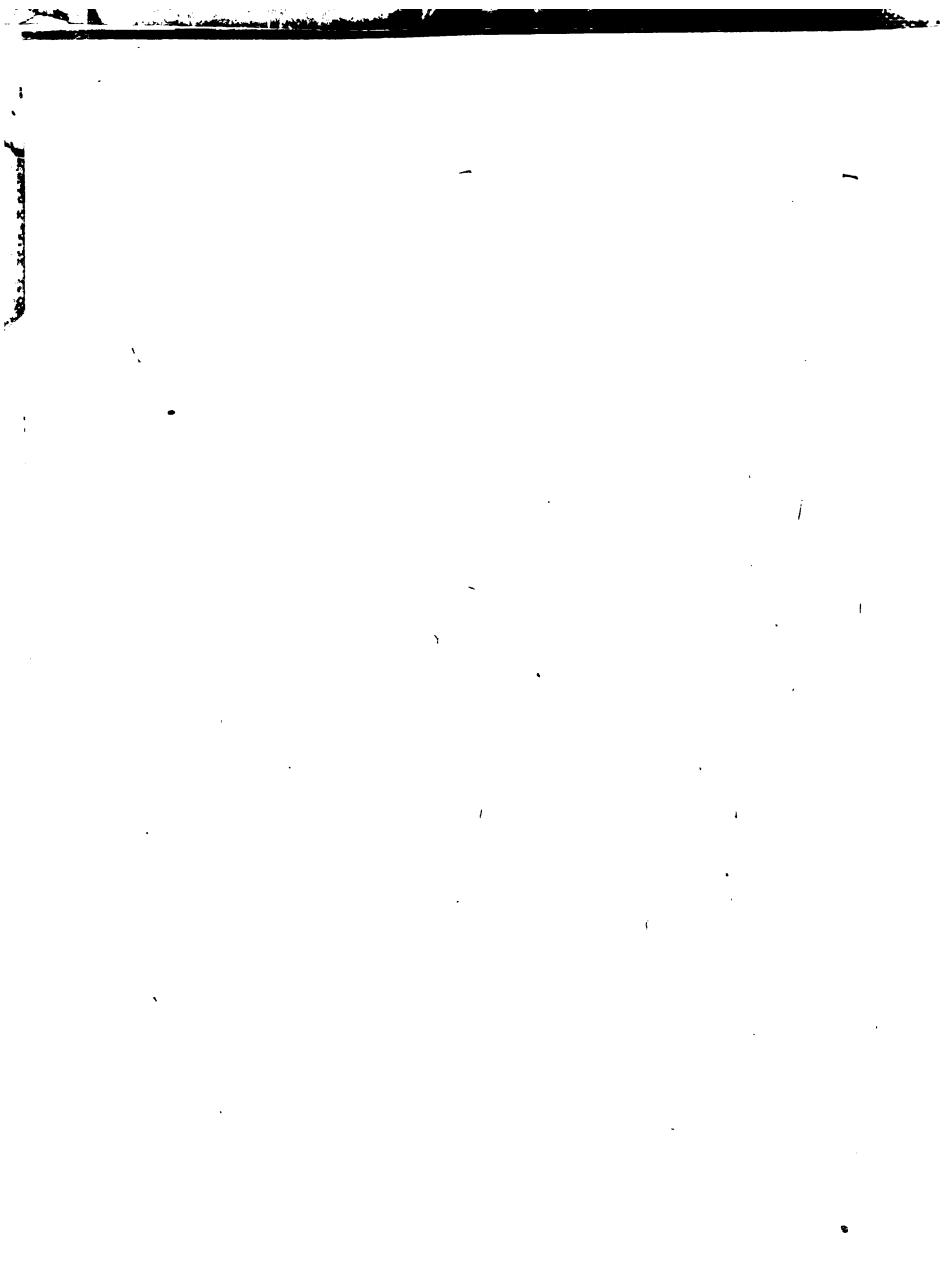

Harvard College Library

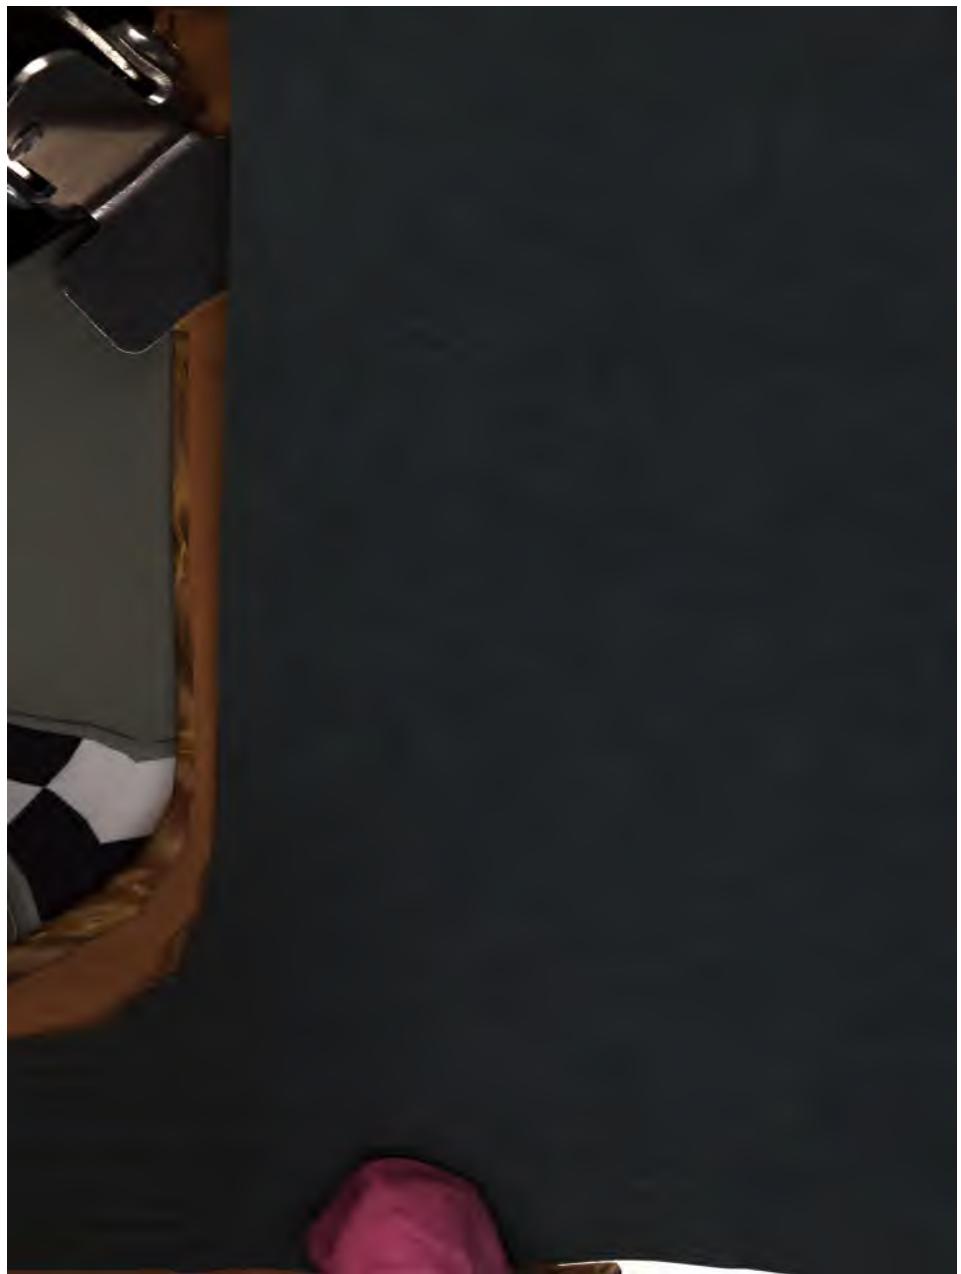

FROM

The Translator

Sonnets to Literary + + Personages

With the translators
conscient.

MOTTOES

I

The world grows more and more profane;
No champions now the Faith sustain.
What wrong hath the Eternal wrought
That we but seldom give him thought ?

II

Know that so long as you let reign
An epidemic of reflexion,
In quarantine you must remain
At Poetry's portal for inspection.

III

Oh that I had but the power
With vigor to route and avert
From every poetical flower
The political bugs and their dirt !

TO SCHELLING—I

DOTH not he ever king in Truth's domain
Reign too o'er Beauty's realm by kingly right ?
Thou dost behold them perfectly unite
And closely fuse in one harmonious strain.
This little present thou wilt not disdain;
These oriental throngs with true delight
Thou wilt survey, so picturesque, so bright,
And grow accustomed to their strange refrain.
On blooms of a far land admittedly
I poise but lightly like the butterfly,
Joying perchance in some mere vanity.
But from the brims of flowers 'neath every sky
Thou dipp'st the wing of the inviolate bee
Into the mysteries of How and Why.

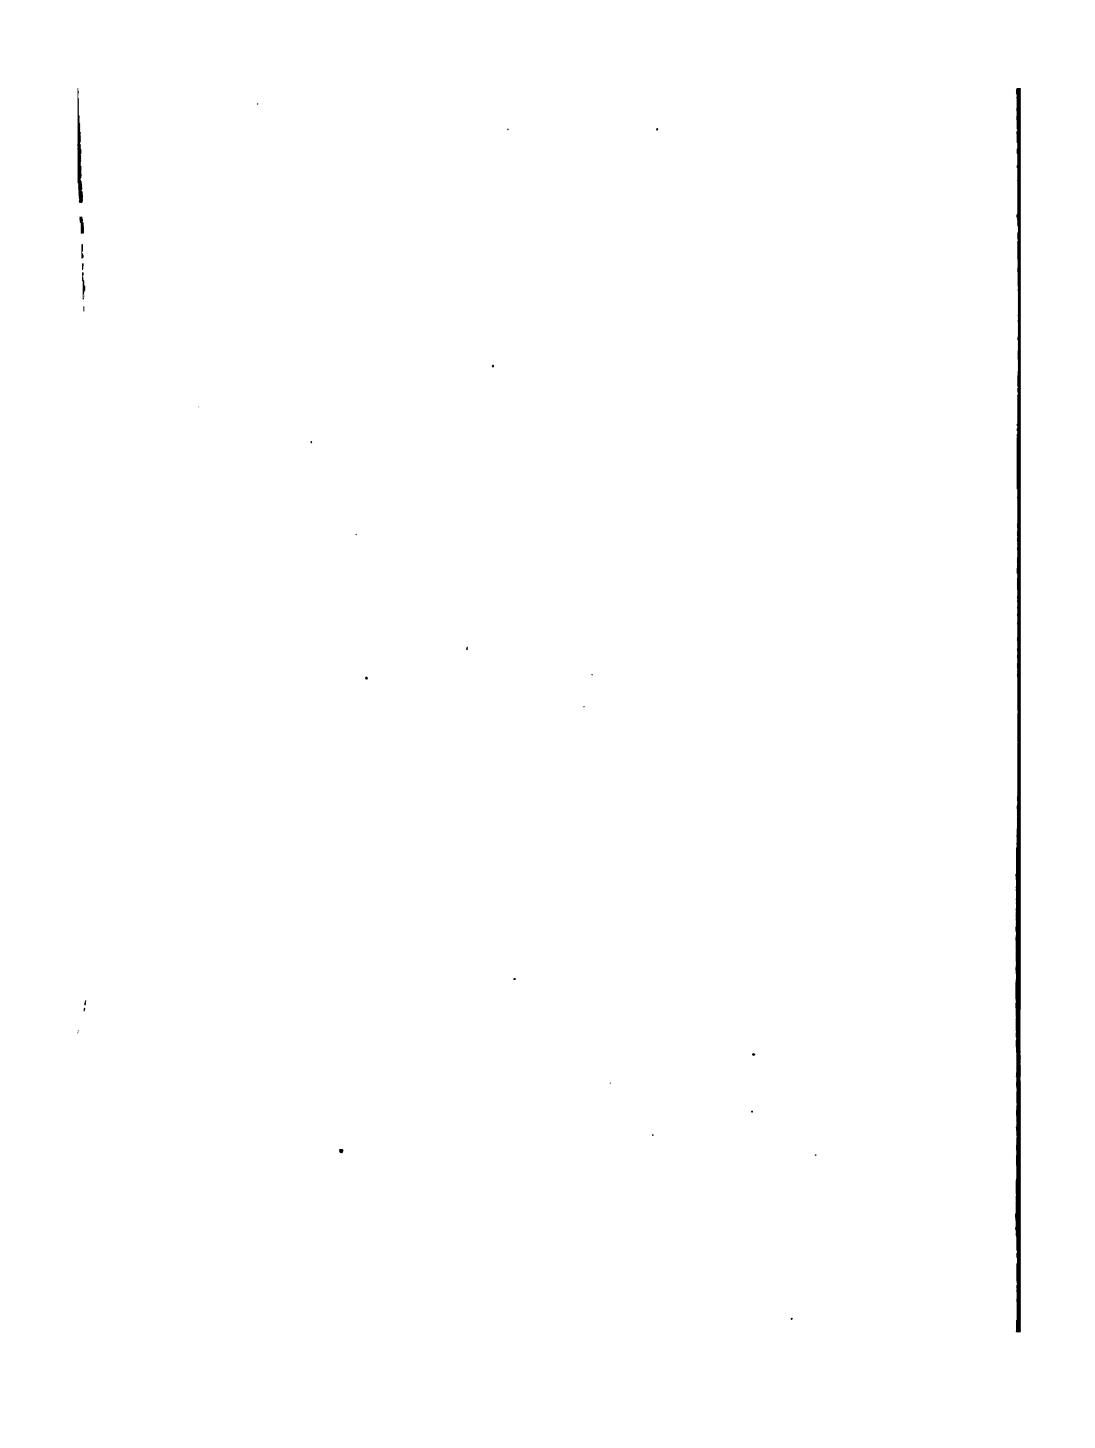

(1821)

TO SCHELLING—2

WE hung upon thy words with zeal untold,
Each in his seat how eager to detect
Th' amazing flashes of thy intellect,
Piercing like lightning from the clouds unrolled.
Our fragmentary world thou dost behold
Entire, as from some mountain peak erect;
What our impoverished faculties dissect
Opens to thee as flowering plants unfold.
Though fools there be who wrathfully display
Their logical invectives, so to blind
Our senses to the worthless eggs they lay,
Yet shall these censors, thinking fault to find,
Stir not the world of learning, nor 'shall they
At any time inspire a poet's mind.

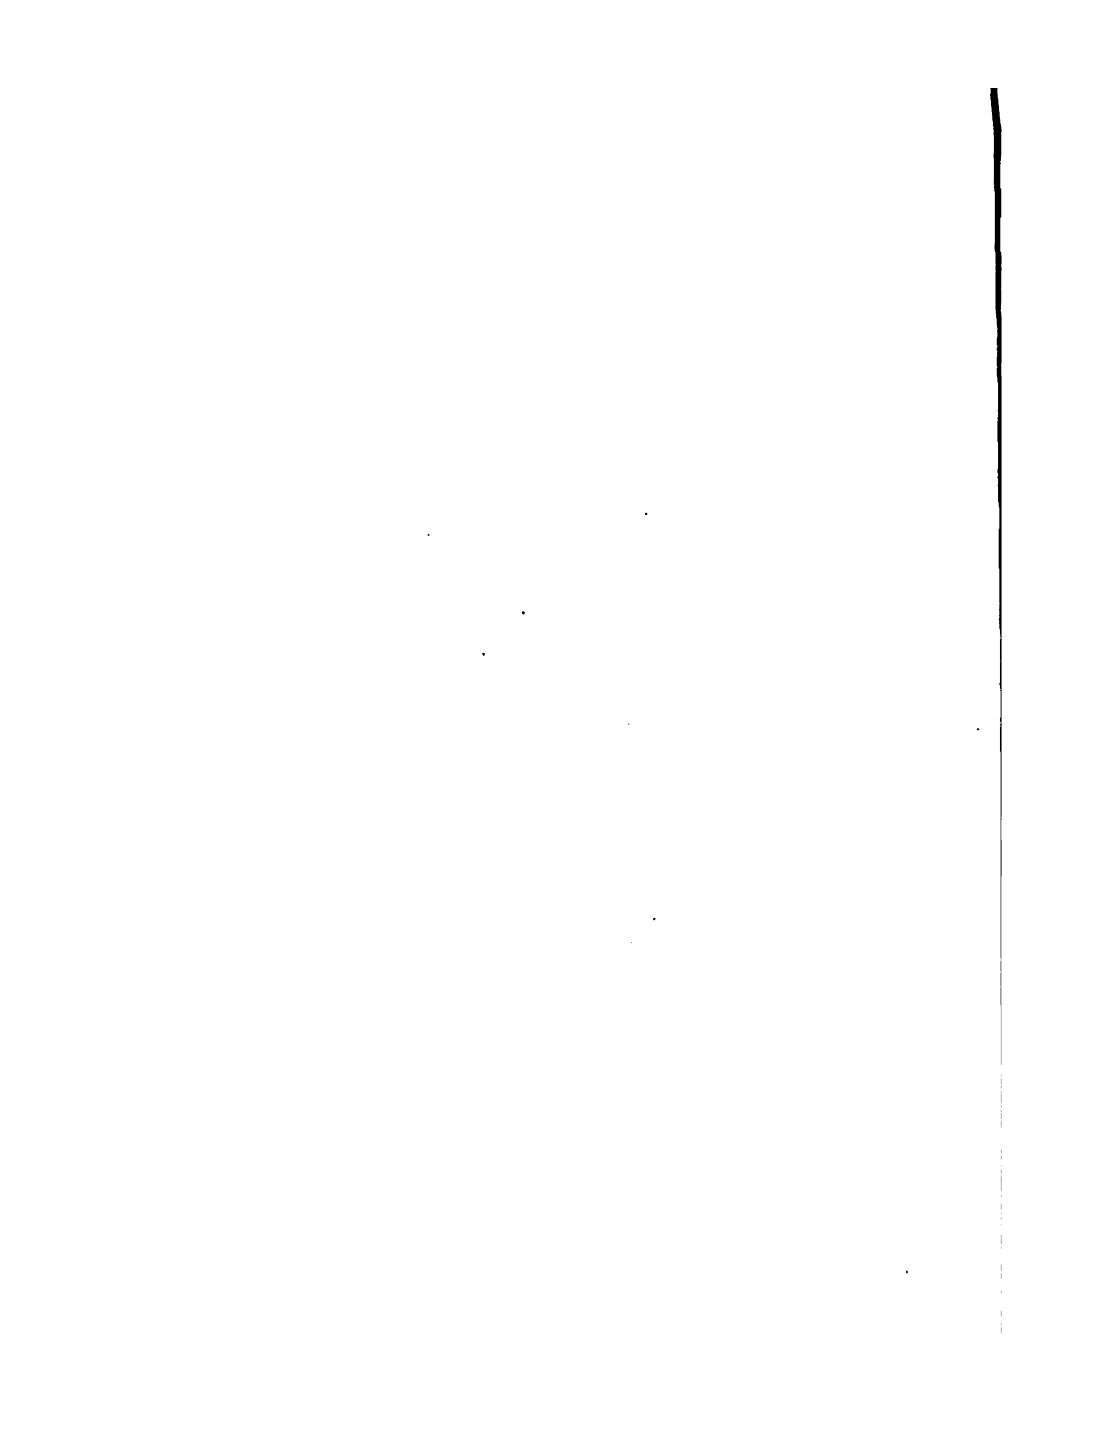

(1821)

TO SCHELLING—3

AS full of weariness sank to the grave
A century, and left at our command
Much that was great, thou cam'st, though scarce o'er-spanned
Thy youth, the course of the new age to pave.
Art saw thy coming, grasped the pilgrim's stave,
And roamed at liberty through every land;
Gladly to her the chill North and the bland,
Luxuriant South their golden treasures gave.
The air is filled with yelpings of the crowd,
The stupid and the vile defile her fame,
And owls through each foul breech do screech aloud;
Yet all serene her diamond flowers flame,
Whose fragrance permeates, like an incense cloud,
The realms which bow to Christ's eternal name.

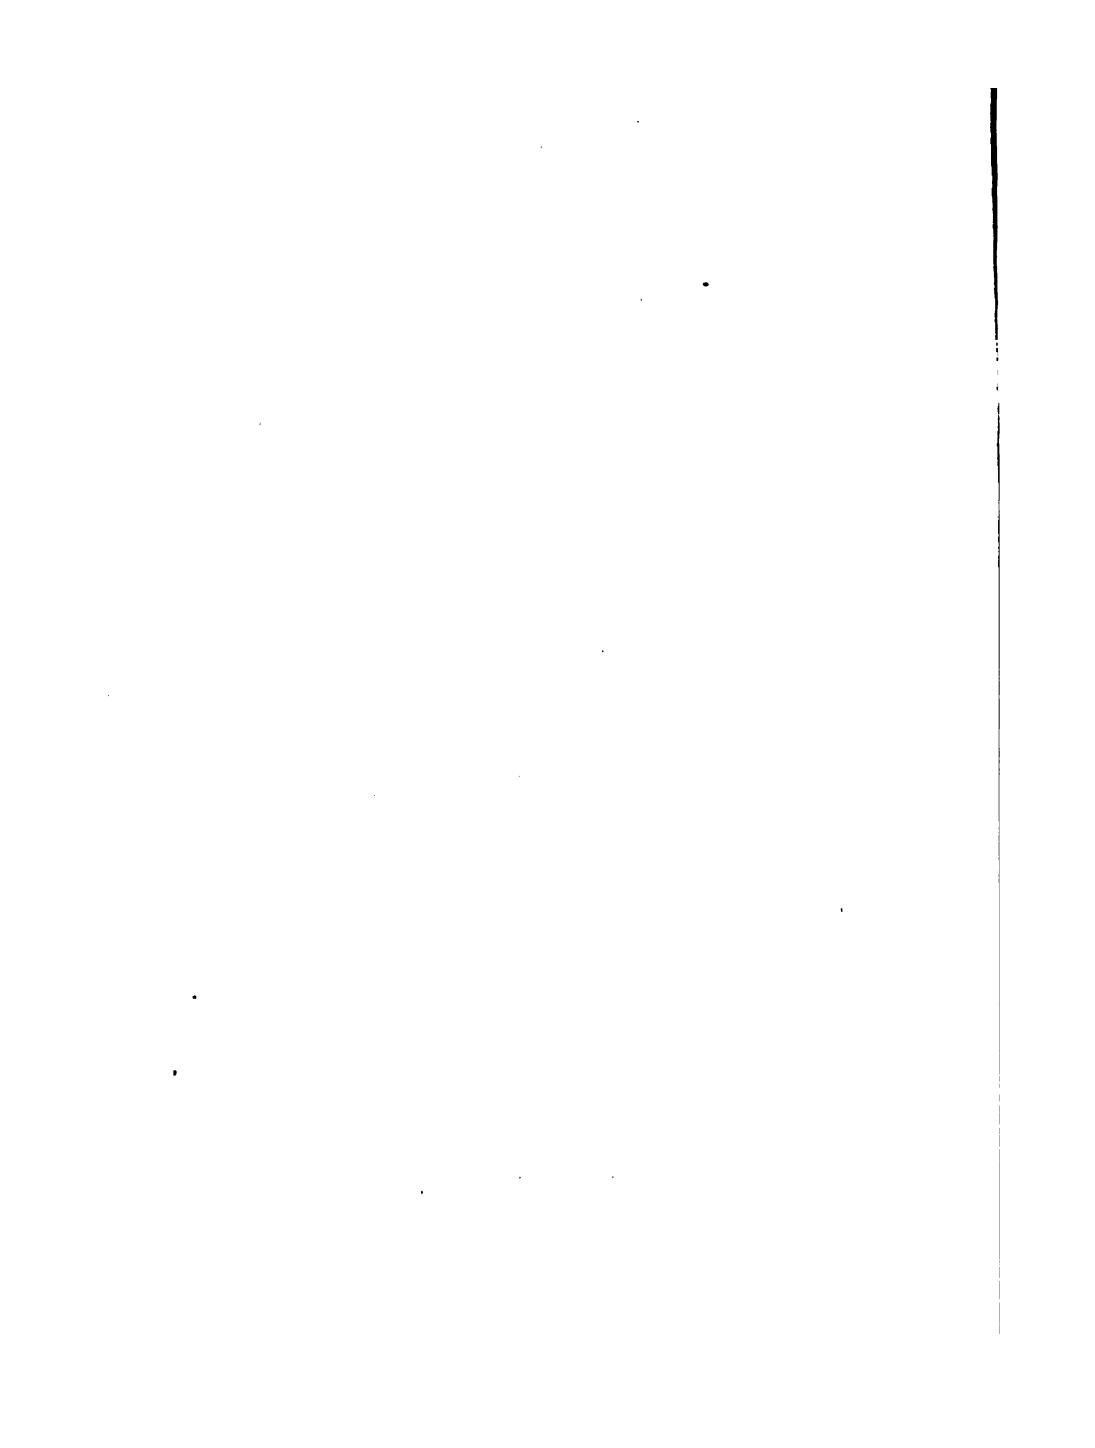

(1821)

TO GOETHE

THOU, mighty one, whom I beheld oft blind
To my true nature of a bygone year,
Thee do I number now 'mongst those most dear
To me, to whom my favor is inclined.
To one whom truth imbues all undesigned
The outward form harmonious must appear,
And what to the unskilled may cause but fear
Must nobly manifest the master mind.
For in whose breast plenty and power upspring
To him shall lordship proud o'er words belong,
In toilsome rhymes to soar with nimble wing.
He fashions the swift arrow of his song
Deftly, and whatsoever he may sing
Is wrought entire and knows no binding thong.

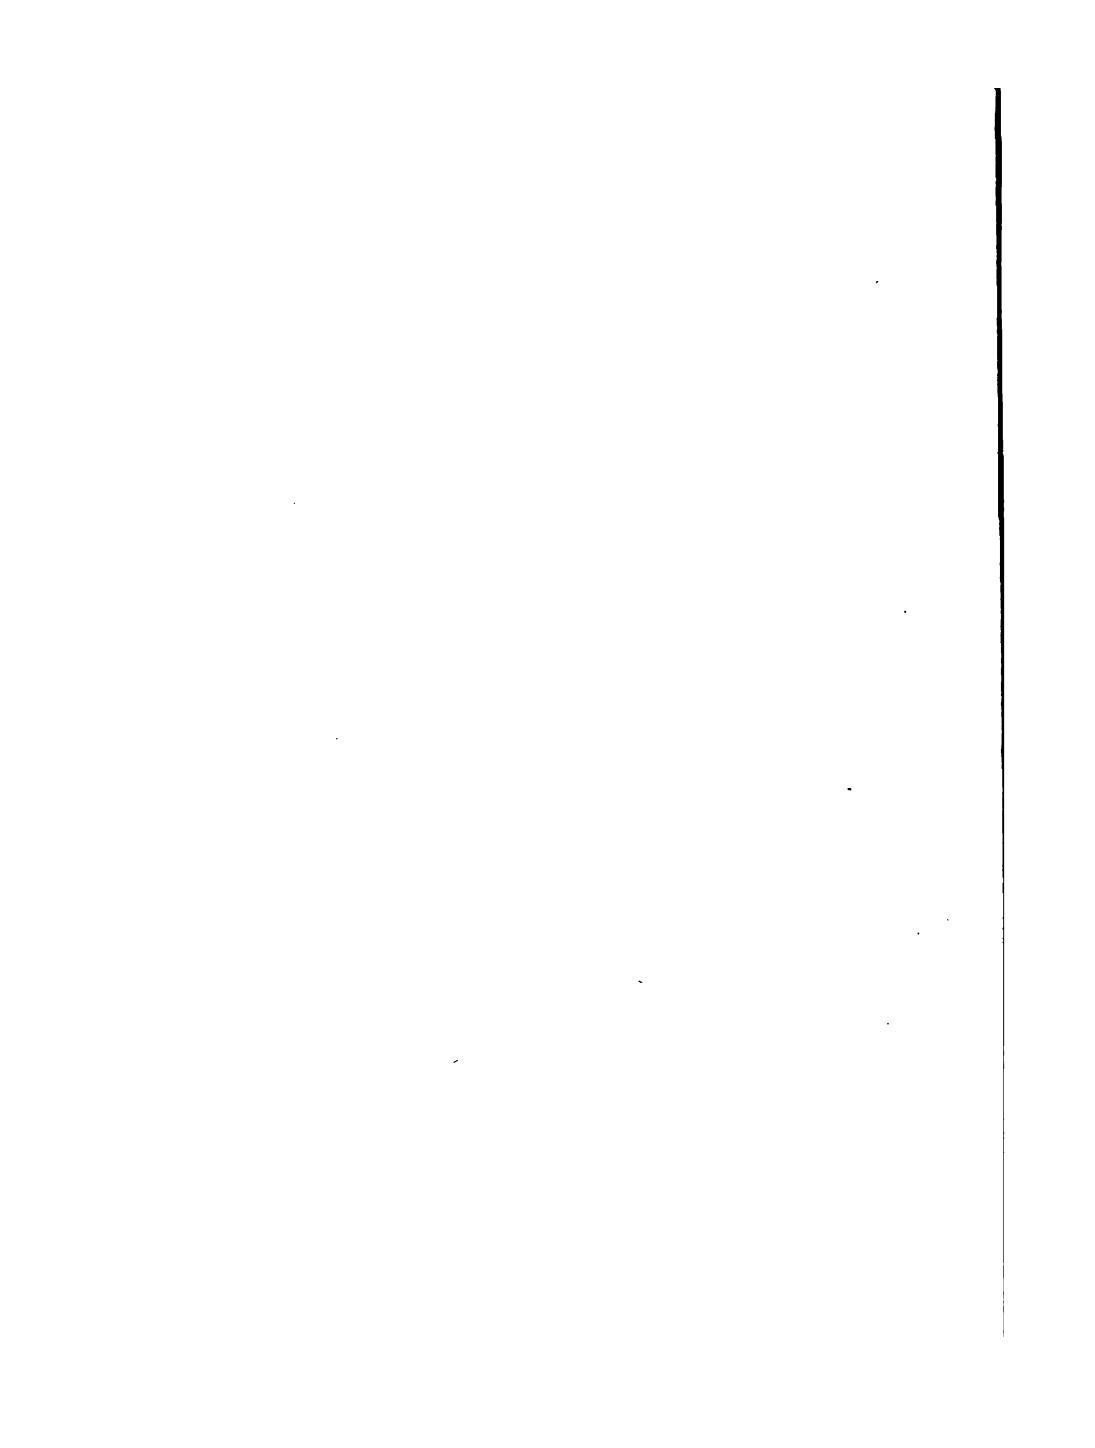

(1821)

HAFIZ

THAT Hafiz is audacious to deny
Were vain; such spirits chafe at leading strings;
For he is like the eagle whose broad wings
Strike the bright stars which circle in the sky.
You may gaze after him, or mount on high,
With him, his cloudless summits, where there springs
Full many a bloom, and none the censure brings
That all save one he passes heedless by.
Whether you spend your powers for good or ill,
'Tis but the form inspires with ecstasy
The former, his own mission to fulfill.
No fool infuses with disharmony,
Nor with his dull stupidity can chill,
The heart which all through life feels itself free.

(1821)

TO J. J. WAGNER

“ART is now dead, its message once expressed.”
I see thee, crying this, turn up thy nose,
As were we all stuck in a swamp, nor chose
To sail abroad at Poesy’s behest.
Th’ Eternal is sold out, so hast thou guessed,
As if we spoke merely of shop-worn hose.
That is the strongest trump thou canst disclose,
Of all thy tricks that is the trickiest.
Never presume, ensnared by whims so vain,
To comprehend the Muse’s mysteries;
Scarce shall thy wit this end at all attain.
Ne’er ask of us, whom falsehoods must displease,
Though thee we love, that we should not disdain
For love to yield ourselves to such as these.

(1821)

TO SHAKESPEARE IN HIS SONNETS

O H who than thou can pierce the heart's depths deeper?

The best the lottery of life can lend
Is ever thine; and when thy songs ascend
Then are we silent as a speechless weeper.
No idle maiden-dreams disturb a sleeper
Whom we behold so fervently contend
For friendship, saved from intrigues by thy friend,
His beauty both thy glory and the keeper
Of all thy grief. Even the gnawing care,
Even the sorrows which he doth impose —
Thou deemest all divine; and howsoe'er
He pain thee by the heartlessness he shows,
Thou ne'er forsak'st him, seeing with despair
The worm of lust upon the lovely rose.

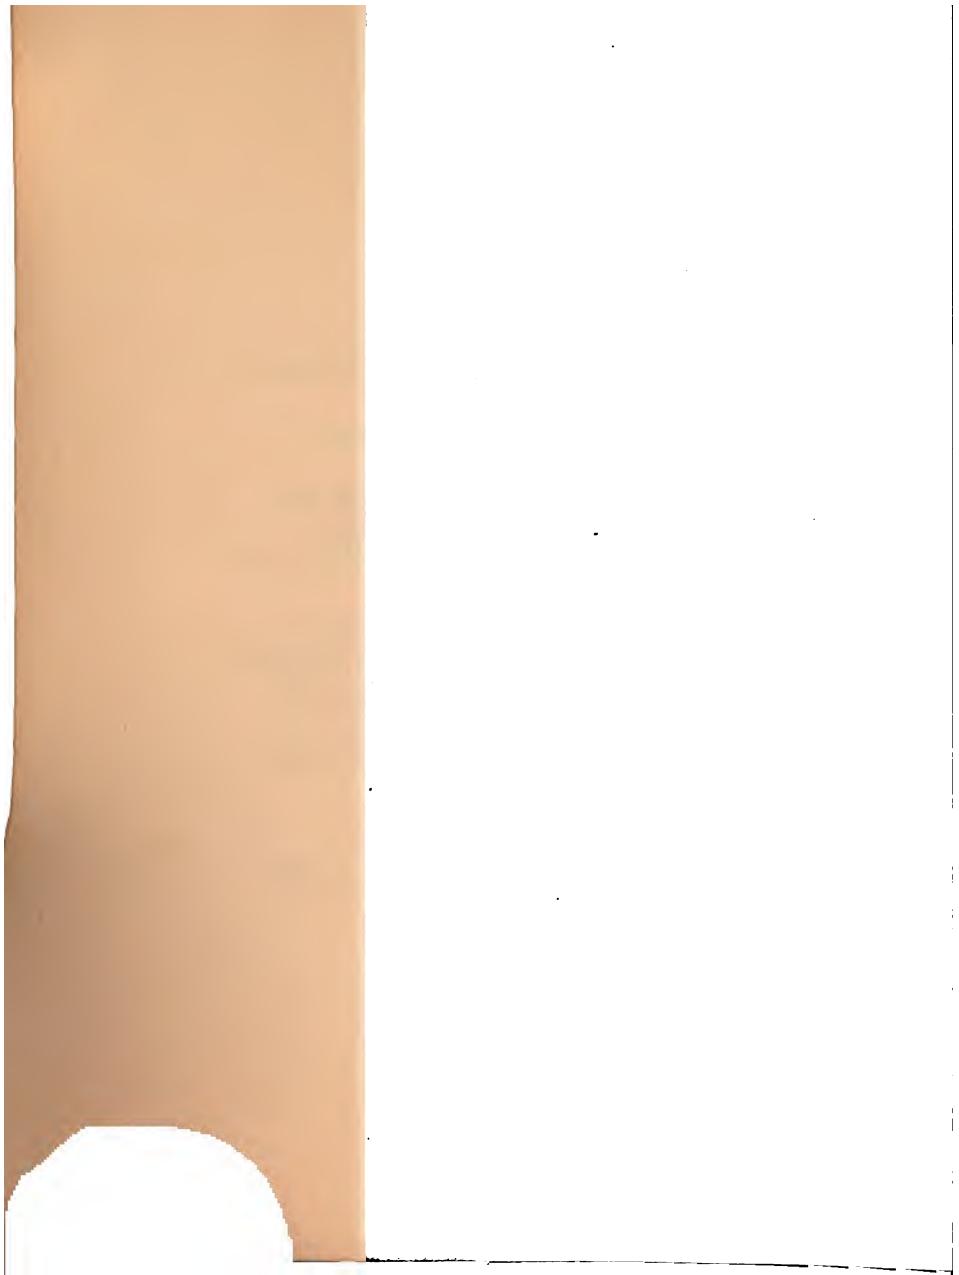

(1822)

TO JEAN PAUL

AS to thine image oft my thoughts would yield,
Of duty unfulfilled must I repent,
That I have made thee no acknowledgement
Of love and gentleness to me revealed.
Now hath Death frozen with his Gorgon-shield
The gaze once rapturously heavenward bent,
And these my wreaths of friendship must be sent
After thee to an unfamiliar field.
On thy good will my youthful heart depended
For cheer, for heat renewed, the smoldering brand
O'er which as yet but few faint sparks ascended.
And now thy spirit sojourns in command
Of youth and health and joy, whither had tended
Ever its flight, in the rich Wonderland.

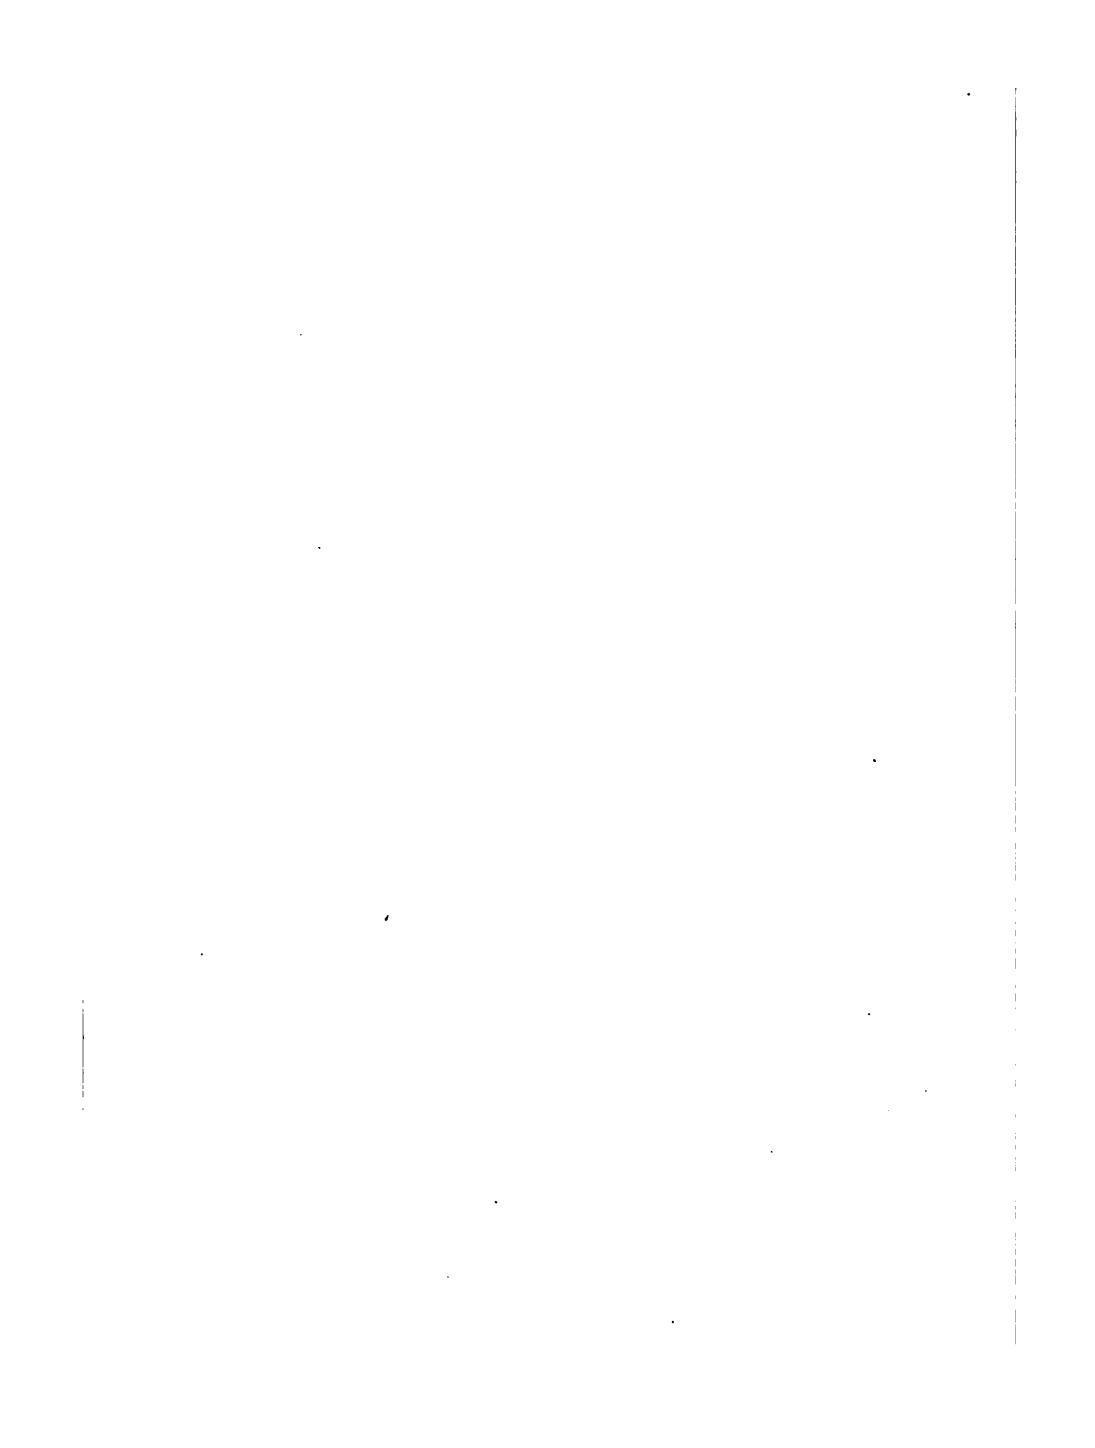

(1825)

TO RÜCKERT

THY book yet scarce a third devoured, where lies
Proof of Hariri's art and proof of thine,
Already what entrancing joys are mine,
As I survey each page with frank surprise.
When genius, begging through the world, relies
On its own wits alone, 'tis seen to shine
More genuine, more rare, and more divine
Than ever, though a rogue's blouse its disguise.
But now a friend and I, if so you please
Rather than give two little books away,
Must toss up for thy Metamorphoses
Of Ebu Seid. Let not my hair grow gray,
Nor part me from his virtuosities;
So send another little copy, pray.

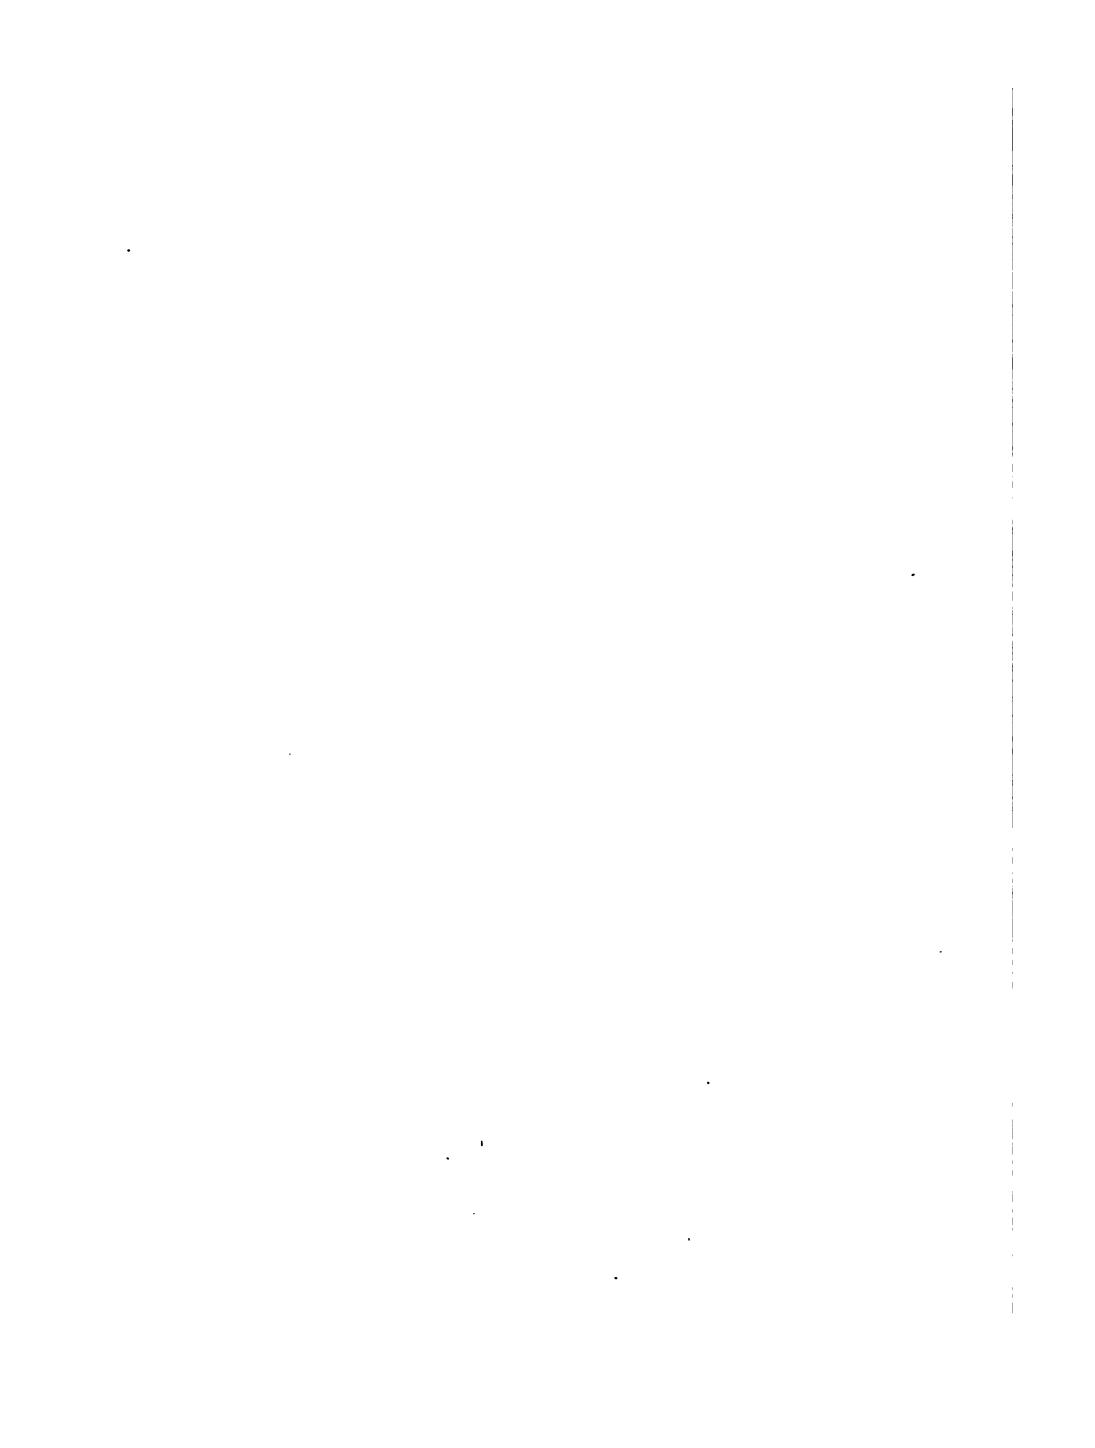

(1826)

TO TIECK

FOR palates without taste thou hast selected
Fruit from the garden of th' Hesperides.
Thy Calderon is ridiculed by these
Untutored Germans, as might be expected.
The standards of Bad Taste, still undetected
And unrebuked, triumph in every breeze;
Scarce heeds the victor yet thy mockeries,
Merely by words, though harsh, to stand corrected.
Let the barbarians then pipe away,
Hissing our poets, who themselves resign
To popular indifference day by day.
But never let them on the light divine
Of foreign masters hands of violence lay;
And cast no longer pearls before these swine !

(1826)

TO WINCKELMANN

IF I escaped canting hypocrisy,
For this my gratitude be ever thine;
Thy spirit found what time cannot design,
Yet found it not in books of piety.
For thee in heathen works, which lavishly
Scatter its rays, the heavenly light would shine;
For what is ever perfect is divine,
And Christ himself bade that we perfect be.
Gladly indeed would certain sable frocks
Perplex the spirit, fain to be at ease,
Or number us among the hircine flocks.
Yet cease the heathen to bewail, for these
Who can breathe forth their spirit into blocks
Of marble are above our litanies.

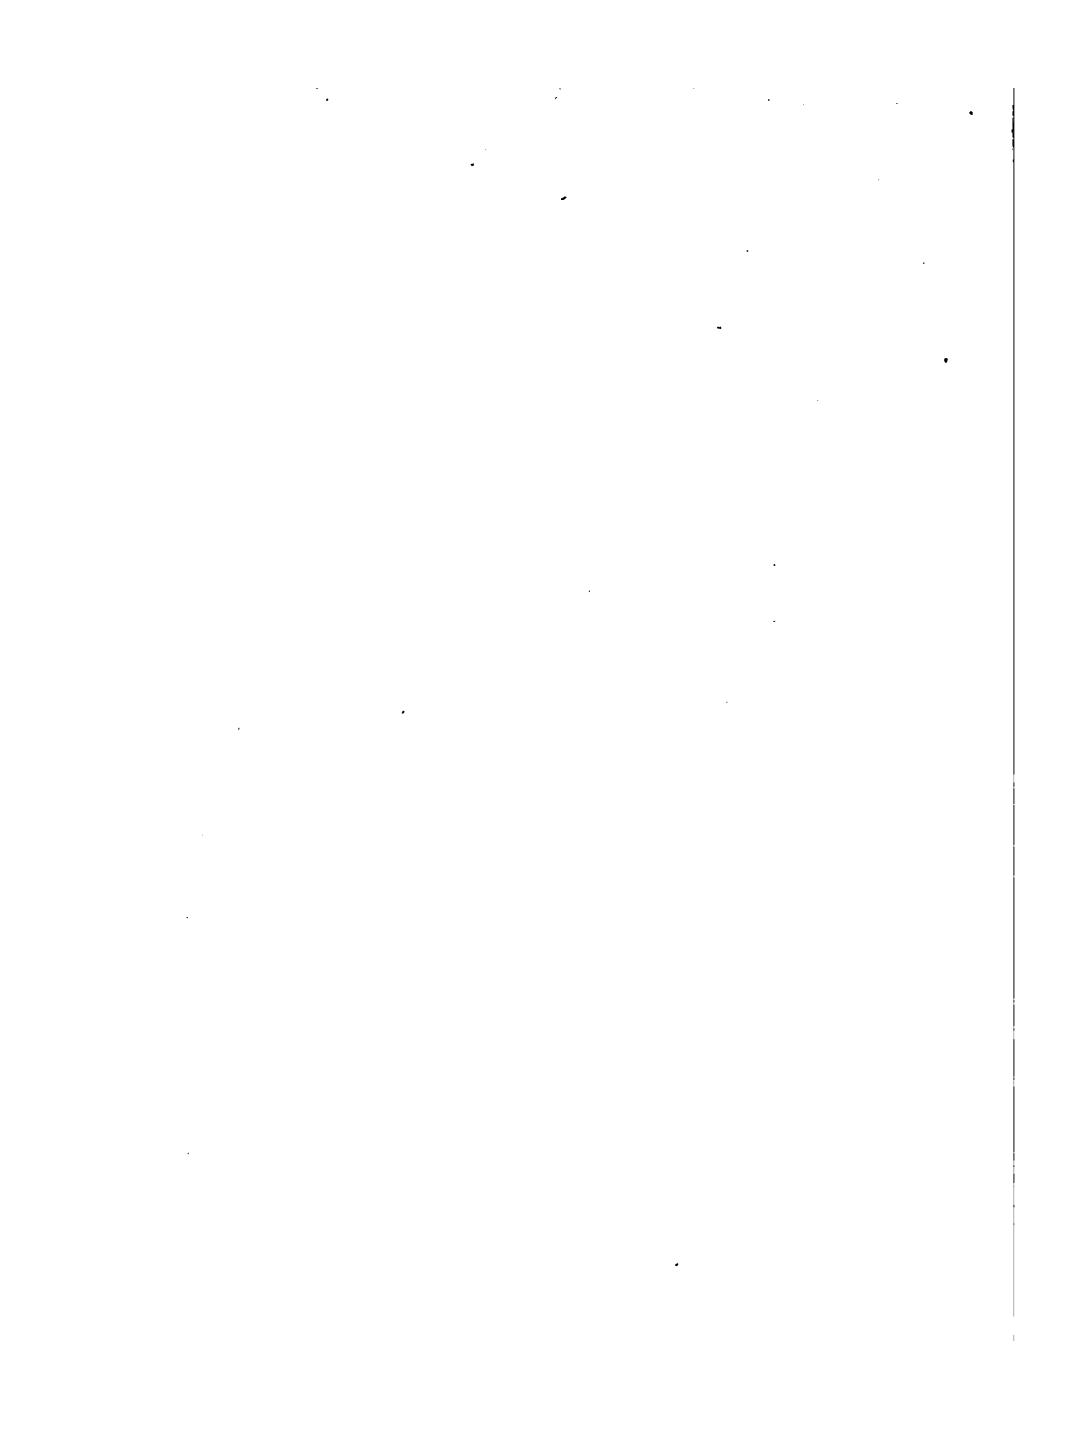

(1826)

TO SOPHOCLES

GOOD Sophocles, keen to discriminate
The point where human and divine dispart,
What thou embellishedst with earthly art
Celestial voices would reiterate.
Knowing its surface, thou couldst penetrate
This world's recesses, and th' unspoken smart
And silent longing of the human heart
Mad'st with thy thousand tongues articulate.
Naught hast thou cast in a prosaic mould,
But scatterest with rare munificence
Dense and resplendent sparks of flaming gold.
A holy embassy thou didst dispense,
Deep drinking Poesy's draughts, now to unfold
The sheen of thy consummate excellence.

(1826)

3 2044 010 560 787

THE BORROWER WILL BE CHARGED
AN OVERDUE FEE IF THIS BOOK IS NOT RETURNED TO THE LIBRARY ON OR BEFORE THE LAST DATE STAMPED
BELOW. NON-RECEIPT OF OVERDUE
NOTICES DOES NOT EXEMPT THE BORROWER FROM OVERDUE FEES.

CANCELLED
NOV 14 1980

